Your Project, Our Role...

The Preservation Collaborative documented two significant properties in Boston's Back Bay.

The first was one of a handful of row-house tenements built on Boylston Street. The second is a modernist building on Newbury Street. Both buildings are located in the local historic district. The Newbury Street building was recommended for the National Register.

The Preservation Collaborative provides thorough documentation of historic structures through extensive research and a wealth of experience.

Our final products are compiled on inventory forms, utilized by regional planning agencies to acknowledge the historic values of existing structures.

We work with all types of clients from homeowners to large museums.
