

Clocktower Place

Natick, Massachusetts

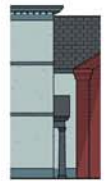

Project Highlights

New facade improvement gave the building a unified look and strengthened the business community.

Project renderings assisted owner and neighbors in conceptualizing the new structure.

Design is sympathetic to historic buildings.

Our firm rendered the office complex. Work included a new central connection and attention to detail for access (below)

Designed in conjunction with King Design Associates, this project involved the redesign of two nineteenth century railroad buildings and a later building into three unified office buildings. The end design was drew from existing architecture, creating a unified complex.

Our firm developed preliminary designs and presentation drawings for a private client.

The Preservation Collaborative can provide clients with project support. From renderings to design assistance, we are ready to meet any challenge at hand. We can help make your commercial buildings like new again. Let us help ease the burden of work. Contact us today!

