

Oliver House History Report

Medford, Massachusetts

Project Highlights

Our firm researches historic houses through deeds, maps and other sources in local institutions.

Houses are the link between the past and present and their stories can enlighten us.

Final product is a clean and concise report for you to pass with your home.

Photo of the building (right) and investigation shot and historic image (below).

Your Project, Our Role...

The Preservation Collaborative extensively researched the circa 1895 Oliver House for the homeowners.

John and Annie Oliver built this building for their daughter, but unfortunately fell on hard times. The house passed to a series of owners, eventually ending with the present occupants, who have lived here for over sixty years!

This report included a deed search, historic photographs and records.

The Preservation Collaborative has extensive knowledge in researching your historic home.

Our consultants have key understanding of local repositories. We can efficiently research and decode a building's past. With the addition of physical analysis, we can help you learn everything about the historic past life of your most valuable asset.

Contact us today to get started!

